SPEEDLINK[®] presents a universal stereo headset for three gaming platforms

Weertzen, 22 September 2011 – SPEEDLINK[®] presents the XANTHOS Stereo Console Gaming Headset: a universal sound solution for not just one but three gaming platforms. The stylish stereo headset with its atmospheric LED lighting delivers sensational stereo sound on the PS3[®], Xbox 360[®] and PC. The XANTHOS also allows gamers to voice-chat with teammates and immerse themselves in the gaming sound on their consoles – so they can enjoy the entire sound experience in maximum clarity without disturbing anyone in their direct vicinity. Thanks to its sophisticated connector technology, it's also possible to simultaneously play-back gaming sound on the headset and via the TV's speakers, for instance.

The three-metre cable offers ultimate freedom even when reclining on the couch, while the padded earcups provide maximum comfort – so you can concentrate on the most important thing: the game. It goes without saying that the XANTHOS isn't just for gaming: movies and other multimedia content really take on a new dimension with gutsy bass and crystal-clear trebles – and the fold-away microphone also allows the user to voice-chat with friends in total clarity when using other applications.

With the XANTHOS Stereo Console Gaming Headset, SPEEDLINK[®] is expanding its multi award-winning range of high-quality sound products to include an innovative solution for the expanding console market. The headset is available from now on for €49.99 (RRP).
